ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to thank the following individuals for their help and guidance: Professor Charles Weiner, Professor E.N.Hartley, Mr. Warren Seamans, Miss Eleanor Miller, Miss E. Bartlett, Mr. Ronald Smith, Mrs. Barbara Durland, Mr. Steven Denker, and Mr. Warren Wells.

The staff members of numerous departments at M.I.T. also assisted with the research for this essay by allowing me to work with their records. I would like to thank the staff of the following organizations: M.I.T. Oral History program, the M.I.T. Archives, the M.I.T. Historical Collections, the M.I.T. Registrar's Office, the M.I.T. Alumni Association, the Dean's Office for Student Affairs, the Office for Student Financial Aid, and the Office of the Special Assistant to the President and Chancellor for Women and Work.

The librarians at Hayden Library and the Schlesinger Library of Radcliffe College were especially patient with me, and I would like to extend my thanks to them.

My special thanks also go to my mother, who provided a home atmosphere in which I could work in relative peace and quiet, and to my daughters, Sarah and Claudia.

INTRODUCTION

The idea for this undergraduate research thesis emerged when I discovered that very little was known about the women students of M.I.T. As a member of that group, I was aware that M.I.T. women are often regarded with suspicion, as being somehow "different" from normal coeds. This essay attempts to suggest that the women students of M.I.T. are unique only in their aspirations for a professional career in occupational fields traditionally thought to be "inappropriate" for women. Societal attitudes toward higher education for women and toward their professional careers have changed since 1873 when Ellen Swallow Richards became the first woman ever awarded an M.I.T. degree in chemistry. In reviewing the occupations for the prominent M.I.T. alumnae, one quickly sees a wide range of attainment in both traditional and novel occupations.

I had always thought that my personal experiences as an M.I.T. student were unusual, but as I gained insight into the experiences of my predecessors through this research, I came to realize that my experiences fit into a pattern. Through personal contact with other alumnae, I also learned that my motivation for attending M.I.T. was shared by others; namely, we saw M.I.T. as one of the world's finest universities for the study of science, engineering and architecture.

I had selected M.I.T. initially because I was keen to become an architect, and the architecture program at M.I.T. was held in high esteem.

When I was a junior in high school, I was fortunate to meet an M.I.T. alumnus who lived in my area; he interviewed me prior to my application for admission, and suggested that a visit to Cambridge would be in order. He was not very encouraging about the role of women in the Institute, remarking to me that "there were only two or three" in his class. As I was also interested in attending Radcliffe, I was able to visit both schools and to compare them. My initial motivation for attending M.I.T. was reinforced by that visit to the campus.

When I first attended M.I.T. in the fall of 1958, there were twenty-eight women in my Freshman class and 630 men. I was often the only woman in classrooms and lectures, and there was not very much evidence of the existence of the other women students who were members of the upper classes. There was only one occasion when I was treated in a sexually discriminatory fashion, and that incident involved crude comments made by an insensitive member of the faculty. Apart from that isolated incident, I viewed my early collegiate career as "normal" and certainly comparable to those of my friends at other coeducational schools. I was so immersed in the routine of work at M.I.T. that I was unable to judge whether it was different from or more difficult than the collegiate programs of my high school friends who were studying elsewhere.

I left M.I.T. after the first term of my sophomore year because I fell in love with a fellow student; we got married and moved away from Boston. It was not until ten years later, and after the birth of two daughters and a divorce, that I once again seriously considered completion of my studies.

When I returned as a student in 1969, I decided to pursue a Humanities degree program at M.I.T. for two reasons: I had gained an interest in anthropology through my work in museums and the Anthropology section at M.I.T. was expanding. The transfer of my M.I.T. credits to another college would have required additional attendance and expense. I knew the routine at M.I.T.

and, in fact, I was attracted by the thoroughness and rigor of its education.

My contacts with the faculty and administration were rather extensive, and I was warmly greeted upon my return in 1969. I had two school-age daughters to care for, and the Institute staff in the Dean's Office were always helpful in their concern about my child-care problems (although they were unable to provide any solutions). This was the period just prior to the establishment of the M.I.T. Child Care Center, which now serves the needs of student-mothers.

Unfortunately, a financial crisis arose which even the concerted effort of the Dean's Office was unable to solve for me, and I was forced to withdraw three days before my final term. It was yet another five years before I was once again able to enroll at M.I.T. to complete my undergraduate degree requirements. In the intervening time many changes had taken place within the curriculum requirements and in the social atmosphere of the Institute. I was required to study chemistry and an additional science course, so I needed nine terms to complete my degree. In the examination of the matriculation patterns of the women in this study, my experiences did not appear as unusual at all.

Because the graduating classes had become larger, there was an increased sense of isolation from my fellow --- and sister --- students. But, again, this issue of "coldness" is not a new problem for M.I.T.; "coldness" was discussed in the President's Report for 1926.<sup>1</sup>

1. M.I.T.: President's Report, Volume 62, No. 3, October 1926; p. 47

"There is definite evidence that an appreciable proportion of our students consider that the general atmosphere of the Institute is one of "coldness". This evidence comes in part from students who have been in residence at colleges smaller in size and located in communities where the college is the dominating feature of community life, but it also comes from students

The number of women students on the campus had increased, not only through the increased participation by women from Wellesley College, but also because a massive recruitment effort for women students had taken place in the early 1970's. Some of this effort must be attributed to the fact that a dormitory for M.I.T. women students, McCormick Hall, was available to provide adequate on-campus housing for women.

As a result of my personal experiences and in light of the new focus on women's history studies, it seemed appropriate and timely to undertake a study of the women students of M.I.T. I was interested in finding out who the women were, where they came from, and what their educational backgrounds had been. Since people often ask how many women attended M.I.T., assuming that only a few hundred had ever gone to the Institute, another aim was to find out how many had actually attended. I also wanted to discover, if I could, why they had selected M.I.T. for their studies. I was curious whether many of my predecessors had left M.I.T., as I had, before completing their degree work, and if any had returned, as I had, to finish and graduate. Of course, I also wanted to find out what the women had done after they left M.I.T. and whether any of them achieved prominence through their careers.

Before any of these questions could be answered, it was necessary to attending college for the first time. Unfortunately this reputation for "coldness" seems to be spreading to our disadvantage. Unquestionably this alleged lack of cordiality is occasioned mainly by the scattering of most of our students, and all of the instructing staff, as soon as the work of the day is accomplished. There is too little contact of instructor and student outside of the class rooms and laboratories, and insufficient contact among the students themselves. While much of this seems to be inherent in the situation of the Institute, it is a serious handicap to successful teaching, and calls for an earnest effort to minimize adverse conditions. It is greatly to be desired that every member of the Instructing Staff should make a conscious effort to make it clear that there is a friendly interest between staff and student, aside from the formal business of teaching." This entire quotation has been included to emphasize the desire of the President to urge solution for the problem.

compile a list. It was a substantial research effort to answer just the first question: who were the women who attended M.I.T. from 1871 to 1941? The research methodology is described in detail in the next section. As a result of this research, it is possible for the first time to identify by name 1081 of the women who attended M.I.T. from 1871 to 1941.

In the midst of the initial research phase, heady with my early discoveries, I considered extending the study to cover the additional thirty years, to bring the period under examination to 1971. A rough estimate indicated that approximately 700 additional women would be listed. Clearly, the task was sufficiently formidable with the first seven decades, so I chose to leave the contemporary history for another research effort.

The "catalogue" for the 1081 women includes their names (cross-referenced for both married and maiden names), class year, birth date, address upon entrance to M.I.T. and later addresses, their educational backgrounds, their attendance record at M.I.T. (including both years and courses of study), their occupations, memberships and honors, death date and sources for further research. M.I.T. has attracted many students through family ties; therefore, the "catalogue" lists whether the women married M.I.T. alumni, were daughters or grand-daughters of alumni, had siblings or cousins or offspring who were M.I.T. alumni; this was entered wherever it was known. This is the first time that such data has been organized and annotated for these women. However, individual women may not have complete entries for each of the categories described above; in fact, the data available for the women who attended during the first two decades are very scattered and thin.

Attendance data was organized according to Class lists and matriculation patterns. These have been summarized for each of the seven decades and analyzed; patterns which emerged with regard to courses and attrition rates are discussed in Section I which follows. Information about the educational background of the women has produced some interesting insights into the history of higher education for women. This topic, in conjunction with the history of the "Seven Sisters" colleges, those colleges established exclusively to educate women, should be investigated further; it was beyond the scope of this essay to undertake such a project.

Three hundred and seven degrees were awarded to the women described in this study. Lists of both undergraduate and graduate degree holders are presented with brief histories of the various departments at M.I.T. Some clear patterns are suggested especially with regard to specific courses noted as favorites among the women students, such as chemistry, biology and architecture.

The matriculation patterns of the women students indicated predominant interest in chemistry, the first department opened to women at M.I.T. President Francis Amasa Walker's words, written in his President's Report of December 12, 1883, summarize the events and persons involved:

Women in the Institute

As early as 1867, among the Lowell Free Lectures given by the instructors of the Institute, were two courses in chemistry, by Professors Eliot and Storer, open equally to both sexes. In 1868, laboratory exercises were substituted for lectures, upon the same condition. This continued, with the exception of one year, until 1877. In the latter year, the erection of the low brick annex on the grounds of the Institute furnished the space requisite for a separate laboratory for women, and the sum of $2500 was furnished by the Woman's Education Association to provide instruments and apparatus for instruction in advanced chemistry, mineralogy, botany and industrial chemistry. In November of that year the laboratory was opened to students. In the seven years that have intervened, the whole number of students in this laboratory has been 102, more than half of whom were teachers at the time of their entrance into the laboratory, or were fitting themselves for that profession.

When the erection of the new building of the Institute was last year determined upon, the Corporation accepted the gift of $8,000 from certain associations and individuals interested in the object, as a means of providing, in the contemplated chemical laboratories, adequate space and facilities for the instruction of women. The completion of these laboratories of necessity supersedes the separate laboratory, which had been so long maintained, largely through the zeal and self-devotion of Mrs. Ellen H. Richards, herself a regular graduate of the Institute, who has for seven years given instruction, several hours of each school day, without any compensation for her services.

The role played by Mrs. Ellen H. Richards was truly one of monumental self-sacrifice.

Nevertheless, in establishing the Women's Laboratory, she did not act alone. The impact of the initial gesture of assistance provided by the Woman's Education Association is best understood in the context of their organizational philosophy:

The Association is not a public society. Its meetings are held in private houses, and its discussions are not made public. It carries no schools and no charities. Its method is to welcome any plan or any thought that can benefit women; to consider it, and, if it is practicable, to give it a fair trial; to assist it with money and influence until it no longer needs assistance, but stands on its own merits, an independent power for good. If after a fair trial, an experiment does not succeed, it is given up, and a useful lesson is learned, of what assistance women do need, and what they do not need.

By this method, the Association has accomplished a great deal with comparatively small means. It has been a nursery of institutions for the benefit of women --- of institutions which help them in illness and poverty, and which have opened for them wider fields of activity and learning.<sup>3</sup>

The members of the Woman's Education Association were the learned and wealthy women of Boston, who valiantly struggled to obtain local higher education for women. They corresponded with the early leaders of higher education in England at Oxford and Cambridge, received copies of their entrance examinations and used these exams to convince the trustees of Harvard University that women should be admitted as students. Their network of communications extended to Cincinnati, New York and Philadelphia where annual examinations were soon held for enterprising young women. It is only natural that both President Walker, one of the enlightened educators of his time, and Mrs. Richards should befriend this group. The social contacts were extensive enough and at the proper level for brash new ideas about higher education for women to make an impact. After all, M.I.T. was a young institution struggling for recognition and funds, and the members of the Woman's Education Association could offer prestige through the splendid family connections, and potential wealth through future tuition paying sons --- and daughters --- plus bequests to the endowment fund. Clearly the experiment of the Women's Laboratory had merit, and appeared to present no excessive expenditure for the Institute to bear. The idea also occupied the boundless energies of Ellen Swallow Richards!

The one thing President Walker did not count on was the large response from women. Within the first decade of formal admission of women (1881 to 1890) over one hundred women enrolled as students and nineteen women earned their S.B. degrees. Unfortunately 61% of this early group of women did not complete their studies.

This essay essentially gained momentum when the first attendance cards were found for those women who "dropped out" after attending classes at M.I.T. for more than eight terms. M.I.T. regulations prevented me from having access to the Registrar's ledgers which contain course and grade information for all M.I.T. students. Thus, I was not able to confirm whether the 530 women represented in the attrition study left because they failed a course or because no one was available to counsel them. This issue is discussed fully in Section I through reference to the attrition data compiled for 530 of the women.

All in all, this mass of data suggests numerous possibilities for additional study and research. Additional work needs to be done upon the biographical material for each woman. A study of the migration patterns of these women would be worthy of attention in the future. The addresses are important because they often indicated a degree of personal independence among the women by showing their willingness to relocate in order to study at M.I.T. This is especially noticable in the first three decades when travel in America was still hazardous and uncomfortable for women. But these are mere shadows covering the true reasons for the women to select M.I.T.

Because the data available to me were sparse in personal information, especially those incidents germane to their motivations in selection of M.I.T., I decided to explore that issue by interviewing a select group of living M.I.T. alumnae. Five women were selected because of the range of their course work at M.I.T. and the fact that they attained their personal goals --- a degree from M.I.T. and a professional career. The alumnae were also under 70 years of age and were living in an area which was geographically accessible to Boston.

The years, 1932 to 1936, were selected for several reasons. Karl T. Compton became President of M.I.T. in 1930 and brought with him fresh educational attitudes. The Great Depression, which had such a profound effect on the lives of American families, was reaching its nadir, and attitudes about careers were being seriously questioned and modified. An added incentive for focusing on this period was the realization that very little oral history work had been done with women who were considered "professionals". There exists, however, a large base of information about women who were factory operatives or clerical workers during the Depression. This literature had been compiled by the Women's Bureau of the U.S. Department of Labor during the 1930's. By omission of such an important group of women, we must only assume that women as professionals were not considered to be sufficiently numerous or effective in their careers, outside of the traditional roles of teaching or nursing.

Another reason for selecting women from this period was the assumption that this group of M.I.T. women might have played significant roles in the war effort of the 1940's, and that these interviews, utilizing their personal accounts, might shed further light on that period of U.S. history.

Summaries of these five oral history interviews appear in Section II. Analysis of the data from the responses regarding motivation, admissions procedure, family background, educational preparation, major course work and electives, thesis research, housing problems and finances also appears in Section II. All of these topics were explored in each interview. The women also made comments about the social life at M.I.T. and their experiences with the M.I.T. faculty and administration. Each of the five women whom I interviewed presented new insights into the student life at M.I.T. for the period of the mid-1930's and included personal stories about the stresses and anxieties that they felt in response to the Great Depression and their role as women professionals.

As a result of the analysis of the data available for the 1081 women and the interviews, I have been able to formulate some "hunches" about motivation for attendance at M.I.T.

Women were seeking the first-rate education which was offered at M.I.T. in science, engineering and architecture for three reasons:

1. They came from colleges where science and art were highly esteemed and they were encouraged to continue their studies and to aim toward a professional career, especially teaching on the secondary or university level.

(Teaching and nursing were the "acceptable" professional occupations for women well into the 1920's.)

2. They came from advanced high schools where the teaching staff may have included women who had studied at M.I.T. (Boston Girls' High School is one of these institutions where this was predominantly the case. These educators recommended M.I.T. attendance to 56 women from the group of 1081 studied.

3. Women had family ties with others who had studied at M.I.T., and would tend to respond positively to M.I.T. through association.

The women were also independent and personally ambitious. They might view an M.I.T. degree, or attendance for specialized course work, as a stepping-stone to success in their careers.

A similarly tentative viewpoint must be held when discussing the possible reasons why women left M.I.T. or interrupted their studies there. The data led to the following conclusions: poor academic performance; personal dissatisfaction with the academic curriculum at M.I.T.; personal dissatisfaction with the social environment at M.I.T.; a desire to enter a new vocation --- marriage, thus terminating or interrupting their studies.

This issue of motivation for studies in science, engineering and architecture by women and the reasons for terminating those studies are large topics worthy of further research. The situation at M.I.T. is clearly a microcosm for focusing on this as a national problem.

The experience of gathering this large amount of data and analyzing it has led me to feel that I had skinned the surface of a very large and important study. The fact that a very small number of women, in relation to men had chosen professional careers in these fields leads to a series of new questions about how early education motivates young girls, and thereby exposes the need for further societal changes which would encourage women to aspire to such careers. Clearly other countries, such as the U.S.S.R., the Scandinavian nations and China have created supportive environments in their societies for women to participate fully as professionals in those fields related to the sciences and engineering. The impact of M.I.T. in training men to seek professional careers is measurable from the very first graduating class in 1869; M.I.T. men such as Stone and Webster became leaders in their fields, but we do not find the same evidence for the women of M.I.T. This study, however, points out some of the times when the concern for women as potential professionals was at a low ebb; the administration kept records on the number of women students enrolled for each year from 1887, but without explanation when there was a decline in their numbers.

This research brought to light a statement made by President Francis A. Walker in 1888:

The number of young women attending the Institute of Technology is never likely to be large, considering the nature of the professions to which our courses lead, and the severity of our requirements for admission and for graduation. At the same time the laboratories and class-rooms of the Institute are freely open to all women who think to find here opportunities for scientific study and experiment which are not afforded in schools for their own sex exclusively.<sup>4</sup>

Although this statement appears today to be condescending and patronizing in its attitude toward women, it is important to grasp that President Walker was communicating official acceptance of women as students at M.I.T. He was not being very generous, however, to mention "the severity of our requirements for admission and for graduation" as reasons for the small number anticipated. Clearly, this study shows 1081 women all of whom were capable of meeting the entrance requirements for admission, and 307 from that group who were dedicated students, fully able to meet the requirements for graduation.

4. M.I.T.: President's Report, December 14, 1887, Boston; p. 15.

When President Walker speaks of "the nature of the professions to which our courses lead", he is clearly emphasizing the "inappropriateness" of women in those professions. Even today attitudinal change is required to remove the barriers which prevent women from entering into full participation in all professions.

Women were not openly recruited to be students at M.I.T. until 1970, and even today in 1976, the number of women students has begun to decline slightly once again. Perhaps a lesson can be learned even from the basic attendance data, year by year, for the period from 1871 to 1941, about the national environment which affected both attendance by women and their interest in pursuing careers in the sciences and engineering.

Dean Pitrie in 1931 made the following comment to one of the women who was interviewed, as a part of his "advice to Freshmen": "Well, we tolerate females around here, but we don't encourage them."<sup>5</sup>

This comment surely represents the attitude of only that particular M.I.T. administrator, but it serves as a summary of the general attitude toward women students. Women were given many messages about their role at M.I.T., both officially as in the case of Dean Pitrie, and informally, that they were not to expect the Institute to be aware of them or their special needs. This statement also reveals the accepted attitude supported by the M.I.T. administration toward its women students that women represent problems to be "tolerated" and that nothing should be done to "encourage" more women to attend.

Two issues continue to plague any institution offering such specialized training: first, a recognition of the basic value in educating women for professional roles, and second, willingness to do everything necessary to help those women achieve their career goals, everything from recruitment to proper housing to financial assistance to frequent counseling to child care, when needed, and to career guidance. These efforts begin with the basic premise that women are wanted and needed in the field, and must be accepted fully within the institution if change is to occur in higher education for women.

Awareness of the powerful role that women can play in the professions continues to grow with the federal government leading the way in open employment and high salary levels, and in support of equal opportunity employment legislation, most notably as it affects government contractors. M.I.T. was not the first institution to enter this new era whole heartedly, but the administration has displayed some enthusiasm for the new programs. Progress has been made in these areas both through changed attitudes toward women as students and within the Institute's hiring practices.

The primary document for examining this change in attitude is the M.I.T. Affirmative Action Plan, dated February 25, 1976. President Jerome B. Wiesner's personal agreement and support of this Plan have increased the opportunities for women, both as students and as employees, within the M.I.T. community.

Section V of the Plan: "Affirmative Action for Educational Opportunity" emphasizes the need to inform young women of the career opportunities in engineering and in the physical sciences in order for them to better prepare themselves for academic and career achievement. Section V states: "It is also our objective to remove educational, social, and financial barriers which have discouraged many women and minority students from taking advantage of educational opportunities offered by the Institute." The President also commented in his 1975 Annual Report that "we need to be more imaginative in our efforts than just recruiting from the available pool at the high school level."<sup>6</sup>

Appendix E-3, "Student Related Affirmative Action Procedures" contains detailed statements for activities proposed to improve basic conditions for women students. These range from recruitment plans and materials (20 career booklets have already been prepared) to financial assistance to student support services (including counseling, tutoring and advocacy representation).

The increase in the number of women faculty members, as well as other women employees, whether Institute staff, On-Campus staff or Lincoln Laboratory staff, is also discussed at length in the Affirmative Action Plan. In November 1970, there were only eight women (2%) who were members of the M.I.T. faculty. By 1975 women faculty members represented 6% of the total faculty (61 women and 892 men). The Affirmative Action Plan presents definite employment goals for women faculty members: 7% by July 1976 and 9% by July 1977. Similar increases are also proposed for other academic and administrative staff. Page twelve of the M.I.T. Affirmative Action Plan contains detailed statistics stating these employment goals for the entire Institute.

The establishment in 1973 of a new office, Special Assistant to the President and Chancellor for Women and Work, is another example of action toward recognition of the needs of women, whether students or employees. Through the efforts of Mary Rowe and her staff, many changes affecting women students have already taken place: two recruitment booklets to attract women students have been published and distributed, and a sex-blind admissions procedure was put into effect during 1975/76. There was also increased liaison with academic committees on the behalf of women students.

In addition to the progress for women students, there was effort for women employees. Efforts to improve the employment conditions for women at M.I.T. have included several innovations in personnel procedures. Posting of job openings, extensive advertising, and "serious search" procedures have brought many qualified women applicants to explore employment possibilities at M.I.T. Grievance procedures have been clearly defined and implemented in 1976, leading to a more open work environment.

Another important fact to be considered is the firm public position which President Weisner and Chancellor Gray have taken with regard to M.I.T.'s commitment to the Affirmative Action Plan. To date M.I.T. is the only university in the United States which has made public statements of unconditional acceptance of the Affirmative Action policies proposed by the federal government; these policies have been implemented through establishing departmental guidelines as goals for the total Plan at M.I.T.

The Institute has demonstrated, with increasing vigor, its commitment to the concept of 'equal employment opportunity' and continues to support and endorse the principle of 'affirmative action'. .... not simply because we are required to, but because it is right and proper that we do so.

This statement, in my opinion, sets the tone for the institution. The achievements may be small in terms of the problems, but energy is being applied in the proper direction. Once again, M.I.T. has taken a positive position of leadership in higher education.

7. Ibid, p. 445.

Regardless of the changes taking place within M.I.T., especially toward attracting women students, recruitment requires students who are responsive to the programs being offered. This level of response among young women needs further nurturing at a very early age, in elementary schools, plus more positive support from the mass media in the presentation of heroines to young people. The stereotyped male "scientist in the white lab coat" disappeared with the NASA projects; now we need to dispel the myths of professions considered "inappropriate" for a woman.

SECTION I: The Data

Who the Women Were:

A. The Methodology for Identifying Them

The data for the 1081 women students in this study came from several courses within the Institute. The initial "working list" was compiled from the computer print-out of all former women students who were living in 1975. This list was supplied by the M.I.T. Alumni Association of New York, and was supplemented by the main office of the M.I.T. Alumni Association. New names were added from the Association of M.I.T. Alumnae questionnaire, "Membership Survey - 1972", which is on file at the M.I.T. Historical Collections. The "working list" was then doubled by additions from the list of deceased alumnae taken from the 1975 M.I.T. Alumni Register; these names were checked against a comparable listing in the 1967 M.I.T. Alumni Register. This list of deceased alumnae was compiled by hand, searching for the names of women students which, fortunately, were identified by "Miss" or "Mrs." in the 1967 Register, but rather inconsistently labelled in the 1975 Register.

Official attendance data were made available through the M.I.T. Registrar's Office. All students who were properly admitted, who attended at least one regularly scheduled class and received a grade, have an official attendance card on file. There are approximately 88,000 persons presently listed there. These cards became the basic data source for the "working list". It was necessary from the very first day of that stage of the data-gathering phase to recognize the incomplete nature of the initial "working list"; many new names appeared which caused me to reconsider the value of the approach which I had selected in formulating the "working list". It seemed expedient to start with the list supplied by the Alumni Association and expand it through use of the Alumni Register, but, with hindsight, I must now comment that a more complete "working list" might have emerged if I had started with the catalogues for each class year. However, new names would have appeared, regardless of the source selected.

A card-by-card visual inspection method was used with the Registrar's attendance files, seeking the cards for the women entered on the "working list"; as a result of the normal manipulation process with the attendance cards, new names appeared. When twenty-five (25) new names were added to the "working list" after going through only the first two alphabetic groups, a statistical sampling technique was developed to validate the method.

As a consequence, the letter "R" was selected for a statistical sample. The "R" group was selected because it appeared to have a moderate number of cards, visually estimated to total approximately 3,000.

Careful inspection of each card in the "R" group, to identify the women students, brought to light the following results: of the "R" women students, there were 75 initially in the "working list"; 16 were not in the Registrar's file; and 30 new names were found. The final total was 89 names listed under the "R" category. The error factor indicated by this method was 34%.

The rather large scale of the "error" indicated that further work should be done to validate the research method; therefore the "T" group was selected, also of moderate size (approximately 3,500 cards by visual estimation).

Again, each card in the "T" group was inspected individually to identify women students. With this sample, however, a new technique was introduced: without regard to the initial "working list", all cards for women students were pulled from the file; then the comparison was made with the "working list." The results were as follows: 59 "T" women were found (total); 38 matched the "working list"; seven names on the "working list" were not represented; and 21 were discoveries of new names of women. The "error" factor was computed to be 36%.

Since the "error" factor was within the same order of magnitude, and given the early detection of twenty-five (25) new names, the work of this research paper must be considered preliminary, and the "catalogue" should be considered a "sample population."

The "catalogue", or final list of women, grew markedly from the initial "working list" because the normal manipulative process employed in searching through each letter group of the Registrar's cards to verify names on the "working list" invariably brought up new names for consideration. The "catalogue" compiled by this method contained the names of over 1200 women who attended M.I.T. from 1871 to 1941, but further verification was needed before the "catalogue" could be considered a base for data analysis.

This initial effort at identifying the M.I.T. women students for the first seven decades has brought together documents which were never assembled before. A long-range systematic effort is now required to compare class lists, catalogues of student registration and financial records with the Registrar's cards to complete the task started here. Such an effort is clearly beyond the scope of this undergraduate thesis.

One of the difficulties in this research was clear verification that a student was a woman; confusion existed because given names were often sexually ambiguous. Therefore, if a person had an ambiguous first name, such as "Marion" or "Claire", there was a verification process before they would be considered "validated" for inclusion in the "catalogue" of M.I.T. women students: educational background was checked for either a recognized girls' high school or college for women. If this was not clear or not indicated, then the person under study was traced through class yearbooks for a photograph, or through a class reunion book for either a photograph or a biography. If no photographs were available in either of those sources, then the information in the Alumni Obituary Files frequently clarified the problem of identification. Using this process, ten names were eliminated from the final "catalogue". Other names were eliminated because of duplication errors, generally through confusion of maiden and married surnames.

Given a final "catalogue", vital statistics were sought. The primary resource used was the Alumni Obituary File located in the M.I.T. Archives. Since the time available for primary data acquisition was limited, there was very little inspection of class reunion books, but this source remains one of the best for further compilation of background information.

As a result of these efforts, a list of 1081 of the M.I.T. women students who attended at least one class at M.I.T. is now available. The "catalogue" is compiled both alphabetically and for each Class year. This information will be found in Appendices A and B. In Appendix A, the alphabetic list and basic data set for this research, there is cross-referencing of maiden names and married names, to the extent that they could be verified.

Here is a sample entry, taken from Appendix A, to show the categories and range of data generally available:

MABEL KEYES BABCOCK --- Class of 1908, S.B. IV: S.M. IV (1909)

Born May 20, 1862; died December 3, 1931 (69 years old)

Education: A.B., Northwestern University

M.I.T., 1906-1909, IV

Residence: 1906, Wilmette, Illinois

1925, 138 Bowdoin St, Boston

(Residence:) 1926-30, Beacon Hill House, 122 Bowdoin St, Boston

Occupation: Landscape Architect

Instructor in Horticulture, Wellesley College; President, M.I.T. Women's Association, 1916-20; Member, A.S.L.A., Mass. Horticultural Society, Zonta, Farm and Garden Assoc., President Hoover's Conference on Home Building and Home Ownership.

Obituary: Boston Herald; burial in Chicago.

Complete data for each of the categories described above were not available for all of the 1081 women documented. The women students enrolled from 1876 to 1890 presented special difficulties in this respect because personal information was not readily available.

B. What We Do Know About The Women of M.I.T.

In the group of 1081 women, there were 204 women for whom I have been unable to find information regarding their backgrounds; this group was labeled "NA" (Not Available) in the data set. Of the sample group of 852 women for whom information was available, 261 were high school graduates (or 30.6%) and 590 had previous experience with collegiate study (69.2%). One woman was NA for this category.

Of the 590 who had a college experience prior to studying at M.I.T., 179 women had attended college (30.3%), while 412 women came with a college degree to matriculate as undergraduates (69.8%) and 98 college graduates planned to pursue a graduate degree at M.I.T.

Among the 412 women pursuing an S.B. degree program at M.I.T., 321 arrived with B.A. degrees, 62 had B.S. degrees. There were also recorded 33 M.A. degrees, 10 M.S. degrees and seven women who had previous M.D.

degrees. Twenty-three (23) women had an assortment of degrees which have been collected under the category, "Other Degrees"; these degrees included "B.L." and "Ph.B." (which was awarded by Brown University).

Table I-1 contains the specific data for each of the seven decades regarding the educational backgrounds of the 1081 women examined in this essay. The yearly entries for this information will be found in Appendix C.

Three hundred and twenty-nine (329) women of the 852 women in the sample group were classified as "Special Students." This category was used at M.I.T. from the earliest classes in the 1870's; the 15th Annual Catalogue for the academic year, 1879-1880 mentions "Special Students":

'Special Students' will be allowed to enter special divisions of either of the courses, --- as, for example, the classes of mathematics, chemistry, physics, drawing, engineering, metallurgy, architecture, natural history, etc., --- on giving satisfactory evidence to the Faculty that they are prepared to pursue with advantage the studies selected. .... Examinations for the above-mentioned class of students will be held at the times of the regular entrance examinations as stated below."

Table I-2 lists the decade totals for "Special Students."

We also know from this group that the women came from wealthy families who lived either on Beacon Hill, Back Bay or the new sections of Dorchester and Roxbury. Private schools are mentioned frequently, although 56 of the 261 high school graduates came from Boston Girls' High School.

What The Women Achieved:

A. While They Were Students At M.I.T.

Contrary to popular myth, every academic year from 1871 to 1941 had women students as member of the M.I.T. student body, with the exception of 1874-75. The percentage of women students has always been small, however, usually representing less than 5% of the total student body. It is interesting to note that the number of women enrolled in 1974-75 was larger than <sup>9</sup> the group examined in this study, representing the first seventy years.

Table I-3 was compiled from the Registrar's Reports published in the M.I.T. President's Reports; it represents statistics for women students and the total student population, entered by academic year. A comparison is made between this official data and my findings, which have been labelled "B" (for "Bever data"). Originally, it was hoped that this comparison would serve to pin point those years where my data were less than complete, but in fact, my data surpassed the count provided by the Registrar's Office. It is clearly beyond the scope of this study to analyze this problem; that discrepancies have appeared is clearly an issue for further investigation. However, this study was designed to identify women students by name, and the data compiled for this study was taken from the same official source used by the Registrar's Office.

Matriculation patterns can be examined for the first time, clearly indicating years without Freshman women, sophomore women, junior women, or senior women, as well as the fluctuating role of the "Special Students." The economic conditions of the United States directly affected the student population, and it may appear, with further analysis, that the attendance patterns of the women students were a barometer for that condition. Upon cursory examination, it is clear to see that fewer women came to study at M.I.T. when economic conditions were difficult; one explanation may be that funds normally available for women were redirected to brothers or other male members of the family.

The graduation patterns of the women provide a fresh viewpoint about women in the professions. The following is a summary of the data regarding the 215 S.B. degrees and 92 graduate-level degrees awarded to women between 1871 and 1941. Lists by Departments for each of the women receiving degrees will be found in Appendix D; the entries in parentheses include the total number of the same degree awarded for each specified year, to aid comparing women students with the total, larger student body at M.I.T. It is especially heartening to note the large number of times when the only degree awarded went to one of the women. This information, for the first time, substantiates the permanent position of women at M.I.T.

For the seventy year period under examination, 215 undergraduate women received S.B. degrees, or 20.3% of the total 1056 women in the study. Of the 92 women who received graduate-level degrees, 40 women were awarded Master of Science degrees, 15 received Ph.D. degrees and one a Doctor of Science degree. In the Public Health program, 34 women received the Certi-ificate of Public Health, later to have it conferred as a Master in Public Health, joining two women who matriculated for that degree.

A summary of the history of each Department at M.I.T. and the name of the first woman to be conferred a degree by that Department follows:

Course I - Civil Engineering

This department was called "Civil and Topographical Engineering" from 1865/66 to 1890/91; from 1891/92 to the present Course I has been known as "Civil Engineering." Course I-A, "Railroad Operation", was conducted between 1928/29 and 1933/34 in cooperation with the Boston & Maine Railroad.

The first woman awarded an S.B. degree in Civil Engineering was Mary Olga Soroka, Class of 1926. (76 S.B. I degrees were awarded in 1926.) Josephine Gladys Thompson Provost, Class of 1941, was the only other woman to receive an S.B. degree in Civil Engineering during the seven decades under study. (19 S.B. I degrees were awarded in 1941.)

Four additional women students were enrolled in Course I, members of the Class of 1898, 1933, 1939 and 1941. A total of 2,308 S.B. I degrees were awarded from 1868 to 1941.

Course II - Mechanical Engineering

This program of study has functioned continuously since 1865/66. Course II-A, in cooperation with the General Electric Company and the Boston Edison Company, was conducted from 1936/37 until 1945/46.

No women students between 1871 and 1941, in this study, were awarded any degrees in Course II. During that period only three women were enrolled, one each from the Class of 1907, 1934 and 1937. 3,135 S.B. II degrees were awarded from 1866 to 1941.

Course III - Metallurgy and Materials Science

From 1869/70 to 1878/79 this program was called "Geology and Mining Engineering." Course III-A, "Mining Engineering" and Course III-B, "Geology and Mining" functioned from 1879/80 to 1883/84. From 1884/85 to 1888/89, Course III was known as "Mining Engineering." "Mining and Metallurgy" became the title of Course III from 1889/90 until 1939/40. "Metallurgy" was designated a separate degree program, Course XIX, from 1937/38 to 1939/40. In 1940/41 Course III became known as "Metallurgy."<sup>10</sup>

The only woman to be awarded an S.B. degree in Course III during the period under consideration was Edith Paula Chartkoff Meyer, Class of 1925. (23 S.B. III degrees were awarded in 1925.)

In 1926 Frances Hurd Clark was conferred the Sc.D. degree for Course III. Miss Clark was awarded a Master of Science degree in Chemistry in 1922 by M.I.T. (4 Sc.D. degrees were awarded in 1926 for Metallurgy.)

Four additional women enrolled in Course III: one from the Class of 1918, two from the Class of 1921 and one from the Class of 1932. 961 S.B. III degrees were conferred between 1868 and 1941; 51 S.M. III degrees and 47 Sc.D. III degrees were also awarded during that period.

Course IV - Architecture

From 1865/66 to 1882/83 this course of study was known as "Building and Architecture"; in 1883/84 Course IV was officially named "Architecture." Course IV-B was initiated as an option in 1899/1900, but it was not until 1926/27 that Course IV-B, "Architectural Engineering" was officially recognized as a degree program; this option terminated in 1937/38.

10. Note: A course in Metallurgy was offered under Course VI from 1873/1874 to 1883/1884.

Landscape Architecture was another option in Course IV, commencing in 1900/01; it was discontinued as an undergraduate course in 1904, but remained as a graduate-level course until 1909.

City Planning became a division of the School of Architecture in 1933/1934. Course IV-C, "City Planning Practice" functioned from 1937/38; it is now Course XI, "Urban Studies and Planning."

Eighty-four (84) S.B. degrees and sixteen (16) Master of Architecture and Master in City Planning degrees were awarded to women from the period 1871 to 1941. The first woman to be awarded an S.B. degree in Architecture was Sophia Gregoria Hayden Bennett, Class of 1890. (5 S.B. IV degrees were awarded in 1890.)

The first woman to be awarded a Master's degree in Architecture was Ida Annah Ryan in 1906. Miss Ryan, as a member of the Class of 1905, was awarded an S.B. IV degree by M.I.T. She was also the first woman to win the M.I.T. Rotch Traveling Scholarship for architectural study abroad.

(3. S.M. IV degrees were awarded in 1906.)

Two women shared the honor of being the first women to receive a Master in City Planning degree in 1940; they were Jane Seaton Rodman Steiner and Flora Bartlett Crockett Stephenson. Mrs. Stephenson, as a member of the Class of 1937, had been awarded a Bachelor of Architecture degree at M.I.T. (7 M.C.P. degrees were awarded in 1940.)

From the sample of 852 women studied, 230 women enrolled in Course IV and 100 graduated; therefore, the over all attrition rate for Course IV was 56.6%. 865 S.B. IV degrees and 172 S.B. IV-B degrees (Architectural Engineering) were awarded up to 1941.

From 1932 to 1941, 163 B.Arch. degrees were awarded along with 16 degrees for Bachelor of Architecture in City Planning. Women received 84 of these

1,204 undergraduate degrees. The Master in Architecture degree was conferred upon 150 individuals between 1921 and 1941, and 19 received a Master in City Planning degree, which was conferred between 1936 and 1941. Of these 169 graduate degrees, sixteen (16) went to women students.

Course V - Chemistry

In 1865/66, "Practical Chemistry" was established as a degree program; this course of study lasted through 1867/68 and the following academic year the present Department of Chemistry was formed.

Fifty-one (51) undergraduate S.B. degrees and eighteen (18) graduate level degrees were awarded to women between 1873 and 1941. The Department of Chemistry has the honor of conferring the first M.I.T. degree upon a woman, Ellen Henrietta Swallow Richards, member of the Class of 1873. (7 S.B. V degrees were awarded in 1873.)

However, it was not until 1881 that women began to pursue the study of chemistry with the aim of obtaining an M.I.T. degree. Of the 30 women enrolled from 1871 to 1880, only two were officially enrolled in Course V, although all of the women studied at the Women's Laboratory, established by Mrs. Richards. The honor of receiving the first degrees conferred in 1881 on women must be shared by Marie Otherman Glover Holman and Evelyn Walton Ordway, both members of the Class of 1881. (8 S.B. V degrees were awarded in 1881.)

The first Master of Science degree in Chemistry awarded to a woman occurred in 1922, when it was conferred upon two women: Frances Hurd Clark (previously mentioned in Course III) and Bertha Sanford Wiener Dodge. (4 S.M. V degrees were awarded in 1922.) Eight women between 1923 and 1934 received the Master of Science degree in Chemistry.

The first woman to receive a Ph.D. in Chemistry was Elizabeth Stuart Gatewood Pietsch in 1922. (4 Ph.D. V degrees were awarded in 1922.) Seven other women received Ph.D. degrees in Chemistry between 1925 and 1938.

198* women from the sample enrolled in Course V, indicating an over all attrition rate for that Department of 65.2%. 860 S.B. V degrees were awarded between 1869 and 1941; 121 Master of Science degrees, ten Doctor of Science degrees and 249 Ph.D. degrees in Chemistry were conferred between 1886 and 1941.

Course VI - Electrical Engineering

This Department was derived from the Physics Department, Course VIII, in 1883/84. Course VI-A, "Electrical Engineering", as a cooperative course of study commenced in 1919/20. Course VI-B, an option entitled "Illuminating Engineering" was offered from 1935/36 to 1944/45. Course VI-C, "Electrical Engineering Communications", commenced in 1923/24.

Three women received S.B. degrees in Electrical Engineering. The first woman to be awarded this degree was Helen Williams Hardy Blackwell, Class of 1924. (125 S.B. VI degrees were awarded in 1924.) The other two women who were awarded degrees in this program were Harriet Whitney Allen, Class of 1927, and Hannah Chapin Moody, Class of 1936. (108 S.B. VI degrees were awarded in 1927 and 68 in 1936.)

Only one woman in the group studied received a graduate-level degree in Electrical Engineering; the Master of Science in Electrical Engineering degree was conferred in 1919 upon Edith Clarke. (4 S.M. VI degrees were awarded in 1919.)

11. Note: The asterisk will be used to indicate "course switching": that women entered or left a particular course of study, and this action was recorded as a "double count" in my data.

Nine (9*) women of the sample enrolled in Course VI, yielding an overall attrition rate of 55.6%. Between 1885 and 1941 3,022 S.B. VI degrees were awarded; between 1904 and 1941, 1,021 S.M. VI degrees were conferred.

Course VII - Biology

Beginning in 1871/72 as "Natural History" and expanded to "Biology" in 1889/90, Course VII grew and was renamed in 1911/12: "Biology and Public Health." Course VII-A, "Biophysics and Biological Engineering", functioned from 1937/38 to 1941/42; this program was then renamed "Physical Biology." In 1942/43 two new options appeared under VII-A: VII-1, called "Quantitative Biology", and VII-2, "Public Health." Course VII-B, "Food Technology and Industrial Biology", functioned from 1939/40 to 1941/42. The "Food Technology" option became a degree program in 1945/46 and was assigned as Course XX in 1946.

Twenty-seven (27) undergraduate S.B. VII degrees were awarded to women between 1871 and 1941. The first woman to receive this degree was Caroline Augusta Woodman, Class of 1889. (This was the only S.B. VII degree awarded in 1889.)

Only one woman received a graduate degree in Biology: a Ph.D. was awarded to Helen Louise Breed Arnold in 1937. (Two Ph.D. degrees in Biology were conferred in 1937.)

From the sample of 852 women, 337 women were enrolled in Biology, so the attrition rate was very high for this Department: 91.7%. In total, to 1941, 307 S.B. VII degrees were awarded, of which 27 went to women; 33 S.M. degrees and 29 Ph.D. degrees were conferred, with only one woman in that group.

The graduate degree program for Course VII included two special degrees for studies in Public Health: C.P.H. (Certificate in Public Health) and M.P.H. (Master in Public Health). Of the 43* women enrolled in the C.P.H. program, 34 women received the degree. The first woman to be awarded the C.P.H. degree was Linda A. James Benitt, in 1917.

The C.P.H. degree was absorbed into the M.P.H. degree program in 1940, and all the previous C.P.H. degree holders were awarded the M.P.H. degree at graduation ceremonies in 1948.

Both of the women from the sample who enrolled in the M.P.H. degree program received their degrees. Rita M. Kelley has the official honor of being the first person ever awarded the Master of Public Health degree, in 1941. However, Lillian C. Maynard Lee, who studied for the M.P.H. degree from 1937 to 1939, did not receive her M.P.H. degree until 1954. (The M.P.H. degree program was discontinued in 1944, so this small issue needs clarification.)

Course VIII - Physics

The Physics Department began in 1873/74 and has functioned continuously without alteration to the present time. In 1908/09 the Electrochemistry option was eliminated from Course VIII and established as an independent degree program: "Electrochemical Engineering", Course XIV.

Fifteen (15) undergraduate and seven (7) graduate degrees in Physics were conferred upon women between 1874 and 1941. The first woman to receive the S.B. VIII degree was Annie Ware Sabine Siebert, Class of 1888. (This was the only S.B. VIII degree awarded in 1888.)

The first Master of Science degree in Physics to be conferred on a woman occurred in 1922: Evelyn Ogden Clift McKnight was the recipient. (This, also, was the only S.M. VIII degree awarded in 1922.) Three other women have received the S.M. VIII degree, two in 1923 and one in 1932.

The first woman to receive a Ph.D. in Physics was Louisa Lear Eyre Norton in 1924. (Two Ph.D. degrees in Physics were awarded in 1924.) Two other women received Ph.D. degrees in Physics: Harriet Whitney Allen in 1936 and Reina Albagli Hutner in 1937.

In the sample examined, 53* women enrolled in Course VIII, yielding an over all attrition rate of 58.5% In total, through 1941, 317 S.B. VIII degrees (including 15 women), 67 S.M. VIII degrees (including four women), 26 Sc.D. degrees and 61 Ph.D. degrees in Physics (including three women) were awarded to M.I.T. students.

Course IX - General Science/General Engineering

For the first two academic years M.I.T. offered a degree in Course IX called "General Science and Literature"; in 1867/68 the name was changed to "Science and Literature" and it remained a degree program until 1880/81. In 1881/82 three new courses of study were introduced in the "General Course", appropriately labelled "A", "B" and "C".

From 1891/92 to 1904/05 Course IX-A was called "General Studies"; in 1905/06 it became the "General Science" degree program.

"General Engineering, or Course IX-B, emerged in 1919/20.

Course IX-C, "Mathematics, functioned from 1921/22 to 1932/33.

Thirteen (13) undergraduate degrees and one graduate degree in Course IX were awarded to women. The first woman to receive an S.B. IX degree was Marcella Imelda O'Grady Boveri, Class of 1885. (This was the only S.B. IX degree awarded in 1885.)

The first Course IX graduate degree awarded to a woman was a Ph.D. degree conferred upon Dorothy Walcott Weeks in 1930 for Course IX-C, Mathematics. (Three Ph.D. degrees in Mathematics were awarded in 1930.) Miss Weeks had previously been awarded an S.M. degree in Physics by M.I.T.

53* women were enrolled in Course IX, all options, and the over all attrition rate for the Department was 73.6%. For the years under study, the total number of degrees awarded in Course IX is as follows: In Course IX-A, General Science, 220 S.B. IX-A degrees and one S.M. IX-A; for Course IX-B, General Engineering, 477 S.B. IX-B degrees were awarded through 1941; for Course IX-C, Mathematics, from 1923 to 1932, 26 S.B. IX-C degrees, 19 S.M. IX-C degrees, two Sc.D. degrees and eight Ph.D. degrees were awarded.

Course X - Chemical Engineering

From 1873/74 to 1877/78, Course X was designated "Philosophy"; from 1878-1879 to 1880/81, it was an elective course of study, not a degree program. It was not until 1888/89 that "Chemical Engineering" as a Department came into existence.

Course X-B, "Chemical Engineering Practice" commenced in 1919/20, and Course X-C, a special program called "Chemical Engineering Practice for R.O.T.C." began in 1942/43.

Five (5) women received degrees in Course X: four were awarded the S.B. X degree and one woman received a Master of Science degree in Chemical Engineering. The first woman to be awarded the S.B. X degree was Marion Rice Hart, Class of 1913. (30 S.B. X degrees were awarded in 1913.)

Dorothy Quiggle was the first, and only, woman in the seventy year period to receive the S.M. X degree, which was conferred in 1927.

(Two S.M. X degrees were awarded in 1927.)

Of the sample studied, 11* women were enrolled in Chemical Engineering; the over all attrition rate was 54.6%. There were 1,645 S.B. X degrees (including four women) and 197 S.B. X-B degrees conferred during the 68 year history of Course X.

Course XI - Urban Studies and Planning (formerly, "Sanitary Engineering")

This degree program began in 1889/90 and continued through 1923/24. From 1924/25 until 1928/29, Course XI was called "Sanitary and Municipal Engineering"; in 1929/30, Course XI returned to its original title, "Sanitary Engineering"; the degree program was discontinued in 1944. In 1970 Course XI was re-activated under the title, "Urban Studies."

No women received degrees in Sanitary Engineering, although two women from the sample of 852 were enrolled in Course XI. One woman was a member of the Class of 1896 and the other woman was in the Class of 1901. Through 1941, 260 S.B. XI degrees, 24 S.M. XI and three Sc.D. degrees were conferred.

Course XII - Earth and Planetary Sciences (formerly "Geology")

From 1865/66 to 1883/84 Geology was apart of Course III, "Geology and Mining." In 1890/91 "Geology" emerged as an independent degree program, and contined through 1904/05. "Geology and Geodesy" commenced in 1905/06, but terminated as a degree program in 1911/12. "Geology" emerged once again from 1912/13 to 1917/18, and in 1918/19 Course XII was renamed "Geology and Geological Engineering"; this degree program continued until 1927/28. In 1928/29 "Geology" became established, for the third time, as the title of Course XII. The change to the present degree program, "Earth and Planetary Sciences" occurred in 1970.

Five women received S.B. degrees in Geology during the period studied. The first woman in this group was Dixie Lee Bryant, Class of 1891. (This was the first S.B. XII degree awarded, and the only one in 1891.)

Eight S.B. XII degrees were awarded between 1891 and 1900 and three of them were conferred upon women: Miss Bryant and women from the Class of 1893 and 1895.

Four women received five graduate degrees in Course XII. The first woman to receive a Master of Science degree in Geology was Frances Lawrence Parker, in 1930. (This was the only S.M. XII degree awarded in 1930.)

The first Ph.D. in Geology was conferred upon a woman in 1933, Katharine Woodley Carman. (Three Ph.D. degrees in Geology were awarded in 1933.) Louise Jordan received both an S.M. XII degree and a Ph.D., awarded in 1931 and 1939 respectively.

Of the sample examined, 32* women enrolled in Course XII, yielding an over all attrition rate of 68.75%. For the seventy year period, to 1941, 83 S.B. XII degrees (including five women), 45 S.M. XII degrees, seven Sc.D. degrees and 41 Ph.D. degrees in Geology were conferred on M.I.T. students.

Course XIII - Ocean Engineering (formerly "Naval Architecture")

In 1893/94 this degree program began under the title, "Naval Architecture and Marine Engineering." From 1926/27 until 1930/31 an option called "Ship Operation" was offered. The present program, "Ocean Engineering", began in 1972.

Two women have been awarded S.B. degrees in Course XIII. The first woman to receive the S.B. XIII degree was Lydia Gould Weld, Class of 1903. (12 S.B. XIII degrees were awarded in 1903.) The second woman was Ruth Copeland Pfeiffer MacFarland, Class of 1934. (25 S.B. XIII degrees were awarded in 1934.)

Because only two women in the sample were enrolled in Course XIII and both women received their degrees, this Department has an official attrition rate of zero for women. 536 S.B. XIII degrees (including two women) were awarded from 1895 to 1941.

Course XIV - Economics (formerly "Electrochemical Engineering")

From 1909/10 until 1917/18, Course XIV was titled "Electrochemistry." Between 1918/19 and 1939/40 the Department became known as "Electrochemical Engineering." For two years, 1944/45 and 1945/46, Course XIV functioned as "Meteorology." Finally, in 1946/47 "Economics and Engineering" emerged. "Economics" appeared as the degree program for Course XIV in 1966.

Two women from the sample received an S.B. XIV degree in Electrochemical Engineering. The first woman was Florence Fogler Buckland, Class of 1920. (9 S.B. XIV degrees were awarded in 1920.) The second woman was Martha Eiseman Munzer, Class of 1922. (25 S.B. XIV degrees were awarded in 1922.)

Three* women from the sample were enrolled to study Electrochemical Engineering, yielding an over all attrition rate of 33.3%. From 1903 to 1941, 301 S.B. XIV degrees (including two women), 28 S.M. XIV and two Sc.D. degrees were awarded.

Course XV - Management

From 1914/15 to 1929/30 Course XV was called "Engineering Administration." In 1930/31 a new title was established for the program: "Business and Engineering Administration." The present degree program in Course XV, "Management", commenced in 1966.

Two women were awarded S.B. XV degrees. The first woman to receive this degree was Amy Victoria Lister Higgins, Class of 1932. (70 S.B. XV degrees were awarded in 1932.) The second degree awarded to a woman was conferred upon Barbara Federman Laven Goldberg, Class of 1941. (56 S.B. XV degrees were awarded in 1941.)

Eleven (11*) women from the sample enrolled in the Business and Engineering Administration degree program, yielding an over all attrition rate of 81.8%. Between 1917 and 1941, 1,714 S.B. XV degrees and 76 S.M. XV degrees were awarded to M.I.T. students.

Course XVI - Aeronautics and Astronautics

From 1925/26 until 1959/60, Course XVI was known as "Aeronautical Engineering."

Six (6) women received degrees for study in this Department. In the sample examined, three women were awarded S.B. XVI degrees and three were conferred S.M. (Undesignated) degrees, but with the major course work done in Aeronautical Engineering.

The first woman to receive the S.B. degree in Aeronautical Engineering was Isabel Caroline Ebel, Class of 1932. (27 S.B. XVI degrees were awarded in 1932.) The other two S.B. degrees awarded to women occurred in 1937.

The first woman to receive a Master of Science degree in Course XVI was Hilda Margaret Lyon, conferred in 1932. (There were 40 S.M. (Undesignated) degrees conferred in 1932, and five S.M. XVI degrees.)

The next women to study Aeronautical Engineering and receive a Master of Science degree, again Undesignated, was Rose Elizabeth Lunn, in 1938. (30 S.M. (Undesignated) were awarded in 1938, and 13 S.M. XVI degrees.) In 1940 Margaret Whitcomb Raven received the Master of Science degree, also Undesignated, but with her major course work done in Course XVI. (37 S.M. (Undesignated) degrees and nine (9) S.M. XVI degrees were conferred in 1940.)

Fifteen (15*) women from the sample were enrolled in Course XVI, indicating an over all attrition rate of 60%. Between 1927 and 1941, 391 S.B. XVI degrees (including three women) were conferred, as well as 12 Sc.D. degrees. 168 S.M. XVI degrees were also awarded (including three women).

Course XVII - Political Science (formerly "Building Construction")

From 1926/27 until 1933/34, Course XVII was known as "Building Construction"; it was renamed "Building Engineering and Construction" in 1933/34 and functioned as a Department until 1964. In 1965 this course number was assigned to a new Department, "Political Science."

From 1927 to 1941, only one woman was enrolled in Course XVII and she did not receive a degree; she was a member of the Class of 1931. 138 S.B. XVII degrees were awarded between 1928 and 1941.

Course XVIII - Mathematics

As noted previously, the Mathematics Department functioned as Course IX-C from 1921/22 until 1932/33; in 1933/34 a new course number, Course XVIII, was assigned to this Department.

This was only one woman in the sample to receive an S.B. XVIII degree: Elizabeth Morgan Haskins, Class of 1935. (Three S.B. XVIII degrees were awarded in 1935.)

Two women received graduate degrees in Course XVIII, Mathematics: Margaret Zaroodny Freeman was the first woman awarded the Master of Science degree for Mathematics. (Three S.M. XVIII degrees were awarded in 1934.) Elizabeth Haskins, who was the second recipient of that degree, received her S.M. XVIII in 1936. (Two S.M. XVIII degrees were awarded in 1936.)

Five women from the group studied were enrolled in Course XVIII, yielding an over all attrition rate of 40% for the Department. Between 1934 and 1941, 47 S.B. XVIII degrees (including one woman), 19 S.M. XVIII degrees (including two women), five Sc.D. degrees and 26 Ph.D. degrees were conferred upon M.I.T. students.

The remaining degree programs at M.I.T. (Meteorology, Food Technology and Biochemical Engineering, Humanities, Philosophy, and Interdisciplinary Science) all commenced after 1946 and, therefore, are not relevant to this study.

Matriculation and Attrition Data

To examine the statistics for women graduates tells only part of the history of women students at M.I.T. It is equally important to analyze the data available for the attrition rate among the women who did not meet the M.I.T. degree requirements.

Table I-4 is a summary of the attrition data for six of the seven decades covered by this study. The sample group of 1217 women included 1031 permanent members of each Class year, from 1881 through 1940; new additions, non-permanent members, or 186 women who were counted two or more times in the process of computation because they repeated a year. The N.A. (Not Available) number represents 25 women, bringing the Adjusted Sample Population total to 1192 women.

Among this group of 1192 women, 207 received S.B. and B.Arch. degrees and 89 received graduate-level degrees.

The matriculation pattern for the 207 women studied in this particular sample population was documented in Table I-5. The predominant pattern is as follows: 100 women, or 48.3%, graduated after eight terms of study (which was the normal procedure at M.I.T.); 46 women, or 22.2%, graduated after six terms of study; and 26 women, or 12.5%, required more than eight terms of study to meet the S.B. or B.Arch. degree requirements.

Among the 145 women pursuing graduate-level degrees, there were 54 women who failed to meet the degree requirements, yielding an attrition rate of 37.2%. Among these 54 women who "dropped-out", 25 women, or 46.2%, left after two terms of graduate study; 20 women, or 37%, left after studying for only one term. Further information is needed to evaluate the two women graduate students who left after a residence of more than four terms.

Women registered as "Special Students" totalled 329, or 27.6% of the entire sample population of 1192 women. In this group, 314 women were undergraduate students and 15 were graduate-level students. Table I-6 contains the attrition data for the 321 women who did not continue their studies. The other eight women became regular matriculating students; this change occurred in 1930. The two largest segments of this group were the "Specials" who stayed for only one term (representing 136 women, or 42.3%), and those staying two terms (133 women or 41.4% of the total group of "Specials").

It is now possible to identify the twelve (12) women "Special Students" who were at M.I.T. for six terms (8 women), seven terms (one woman) and eight terms (three women). M.I.T. regulations prevented me from having access to the M.I.T. Registrar's ledgers containing course and grade information for all M.I.T. students. Without that information I was unable to substantiate any hypotheses about this group; namely, why did women who were "Special Students" stay for so many terms? It is also not clear whether their studies could have been applied toward a degree program, assuming they had performed adequately as students. The list of these eight women

"Special Students" will be found in Appendix C.

Of the 1051 regular undergraduate women students, 530 women did not complete the undergraduate degree requirements, yielding an attrition rate of 50.4%.

A noticeable drop in the attrition rate was noted: the attrition rate for the decade, 1911 to 1920, was 60.8%, but the rate for the next decade, the years 1921 to 1930, was only 20.2%. (The annual attrition rate for 1930 was the lowest rate for the entire sample: 3%.) Because this change appeared, Table I-7 has been included to show the annual attrition figures and the computed rate for the period, 1911 to 1940. The annual attrition data for all sixty years has been included in Appendix C.

One possible hypothesis emerges from this aspect of the attrition study: were the women, who attended M.I.T. between 1921 and 1940, more goal-oriented than previous women students?

Because this attrition data for M.I.T. women students is now available, it is possible to consider this data, as a base, for further research and analysis of the matriculation and attrition patterns among other groups of women students. Comparisons can now be made with the attrition data from women's colleges, especially with those groups of women students who majored in comparable degree programs.

Table I-8 contains the figures for Freshmen, sophomore, junior and senior attrition data for the six decades. (See Appendix C.)

Freshman attrition has been computed for those women who started M.I.T. as Freshman and then withdrew at some point in their studies; this segment of the sample population will be identified by the term, "Freshmen." "Freshman" attrition represents 40.9% of the total sample, or 217 or the 530 women.

"Sophomore" attrition means those women who entered M.I.T. as second year or sophomore students and then withdrew; the "Sophomore" attrition rate was 31.3% for the total sample, or 166 of the 530 women.

"Junior" attrition is used to represent those women who entered M.I.T. as third year or junior students and then withdrew. "Junior" attrition was 13.7%, or 73 of the 530 women sampled.

"Senior" attrition indicates women who entered M.I.T. classified as fourth year students or seniors, and then withdrew without completing the undergraduate degree requirements. "Senior" attrition was 13.9% or the total sample, or 74 of the 530 women.

Twenty-one (21) Freshmen women left M.I.T. at the end of one term of study (9.6% of the "Freshman" attrition total); 91 Freshmen women withdrew after the first two terms (41.9%). 112 women, or 21.1% of the total sample, departed after the first year.

During the second or sophomore year, ten (10) "Freshmen" (4.6% of that attrition group) and 28 "Sophomores" (16.8% of the "Sophomore" attrition group) withdrew. At the end of the second term, another 32 "Freshmen" women (14.7%) and 72 "Sophomores" (43.4%) left the Institute. 142 more women, or 26.7% of the total sample, were removed from the attendance rolls. By the end of the second year, 47.8% or 254 of the 530 women sampled had withdrawn from M.I.T.

In the first term of the third or junior year, ten (10) "Freshmen" women (4.6%), 14 "Sophomores" (8.4%) and 22 entering "Juniors" (30.1%) departed. By the second term, 33 "Freshmen" (15.2%), 34 "Sophomores" (20.4%) and 25 "Juniors" (34.2%) decided to withdraw from M.I.T. At the end of the third year, another 26% or 138 of the 530 women sampled, were no longer matriculating students; over all, 392 of the women, or 73.9%, had given up their studies.

During the fourth or senior year, five (5) "Freshmen" (2.3%), nine (9) "Sophomores" (5.4%), six (6) "Juniors" (8.2%) and 37 "Seniors" (50%) withdrew at the end of the first term. Fifty-seven (57) women, or 10.7% of the total examined, with proper guidance might have been persuaded to continue and complete their degree requirements.

The second-term attrition data for the senior year represents more evidence to suggest a need for counseling: ten (10) "Freshmen" (4.6%), nine (9) "Sophomores" (5.4%), 20 "Juniors" (27.3%) and 37 "Seniors" (50%) left M.I.T. without completing their degree requirements. Another 76 women (14.3% of the total sample) could have been encouraged to continue toward their degree objective. This group of 133 women (25% of the total sample) is clear evidence that the M.I.T. administration was not aware of the serious need for counseling among its women students.

Another issue raised by this data for the fourth year students is the policy of admitting individuals as seniors. Due to the Registrar's regulations, I was not able to investigate the conditions under which the 74 "Seniors" entered M.I.T. But one hypothesis emerged: did they come for a special program of study not connected to a specific degree program? But if that was the case, why weren't they registered as "Special Students"?

An additional five (5) "Freshmen" women remained at the Institute for more than eight terms; one woman was enrolled for twenty terms!

If these 138 women had received guidance toward successful completion of the S.B. or B.Arch. degree requirements, a 39% increase would have been registered in the number of women graduates in this study. It is appropriate for further research to be authorized to examine the rather unusual situation.

Family Ties

Another aspect of this study was the investigation of the role that relatives and other family members played in creating an environment which encouraged the women to become students at M.I.T. Forty-three (43) of the women in the sample of 852 women were siblings of other M.I.T. students. One set of twin sisters, Helen L. and Alice M. Burr, matriculated as members of the Class of 1899. Nine (9) women had cousins who were M.I.T. students. Three women were the daughters or grand-daughters of M.I.T. alumni.

Seventy-nine (79) women married men who were M.I.T. alumni, and ten (10) of the women produced children and grand-children who attended M.I.T.

Table I-9 contains the data for this study of M.I.T. "family ties."

Occupations

Whether they were successful in being awarded an M.I.T. degree or not, the women entered careers, and some attained national prominence. Of the 1081 women in this study, there was information for 339 of them about their careers.

Forty-nine (49) women became elementary school teachers and/or principals; forty-four (44) were high school teachers and/or principals; and fifty-four (54) became members of collegiate faculty at all levels. The 147 women who entered occupations related to education represented 43.4% of the 339 women in the "occupations" sample group.

Twenty-four (24) women entered public health-related fields; 37 women became architects; five women were listed as artists; six women entered occupations related to social work; four women were nationally known philanthropists; 15 became writers; and 19 were physicians.

Ninety-one (91) women were clustered in a category called "Other Occupations", which included school nurses, museum curators, executives and secretaries, and thirty-six (36) women who were employed in occupations commonly labelled "inappropriate" for women to pursue.

The "inappropriate" (viz. male-dominated) occupations included: six industrial chemists; four food technology/nutrition researchers; three women employed by the General Electric Company in research or engineering positions; three physicists; three geologists; two aeronautical engineers; a naval architect; two patent attorneys; a meteorologist; a cytopathologist; a hydraulic engineer; a public school superintendent; a financier; a biologist; a civil liberties advocate; a geographer; an electronics corporation executive; a science editor; and an aviatrix.

Some of the women attained national prominence. These brief descriptions of their achievements may serve to indicate the range of interest and abilities among the women of M.I.T.:

ELLEN SWALLOW RICHARDS, Class of 1873, was known for her research in public health, food technology, household chemistry and eugenics. She was the prime mover and founder of the American Home Economics Association. Two thorough biographies of the energetic first M.I.T. woman graduate are available.

BESSIE T. CAPEN, Class of 1878, was a noted educator for young women in Boston, and the founder of Miss Capen's School for Girls in Northampton, Massachusetts. The educational principles which Miss Capen established at her school may have been gained from her experiences at M.I.T. because she emphasized personal freedom to develop self-discipline and appreciation for intellectual achievement. Her school had no large study halls or daily assignments, but operated with a syllabus known to all.

SUSAN MINNS, Class of 1881, inherited a vast fortune from her maternal grandfather, Nathaniel Parker, an East India merchant from Boston. She was a generous public philanthropist who contributed 20,000 sq. ft. of land along Memorial Drive to M.I.T. for construction of a laboratory. She also donated 127 acres of the family's estate in Princeton, Massachusetts to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts; this area, Little Wachusett, is a well-known bird sanctuary today. Miss Minns was also a well-known art collector, specializing in art depicting death; her collection, which included several etchings by Holbein and Durer, was given to the Fogg Art Museum of Harvard University. Her botanical discoveries were included in Gray's Manual of the Botany of the Northern United States. In the 1920's Miss Minns wrote a book on silkworms and the culture of silk.

MARY TILTON PALMER, Class of 1884, was another philanthropist of note. She contributed generously toward the endowment of the Palmer Memorial Cancer Hospital in Boston. Miss Palmer was reported to have written a scientific work on spiders.

MARCELLA I. O'GRADY BOVERI, Class of 1885, was the founder of the Biology Department at Albertus Magnus College in New Haven, Connecticut; she was Biology Professor there until 1943.

ALICE G. BRYANT, Class of 1886, was the first woman physician to specialize in the treatment of ear, nose and throat diseases. She was also a pioneer in establishing evening clinics, serving actively in Boston at the Trinity Dispensary. Dr. Bryant wrote over 75 articles in her special field; she also invented medical instruments which are not considered "standard" for the ear, nose and throat field.

ISABEL F. HYAMS, Class of 1888, worked to promote public interest in the care of the young, the needy, the sick and the unfortunate. As a trustee of the Boston Sanatorium and Clerk, for a quarter century, of the Boston Tuberculosis Association, Miss Hyams contributed both time and money toward eradication of tuberculosis. In 1895 she founded the Louisa M. Alcott Club in the South Eng section of Boston to provide social welfare assistance to young people. Her family fortune continues today to serve the needs of children through the Boston-based Hyams Foundation.

MARION TALBOT, Class of 1888, was the daughter of the Dean of the School of Medicine at Boston University, so it was only natural for her to enter academia. She became Professor Emerita at the University of Chicago, having served in the Sanitary Science/Household Administration Department. Miss Talbot was President of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae from 1895 to 1897, a Fellow of A.A.A.S. and a Fellow of the American Public Health Association. She became nationally known for her work in creating new educational opportunities for women. Prof. Talbot was one of the founders of the American Association of University Women, and co-author of a history of that worthy organization. She also published widely on education for women.

ANNE GRAHAM ROCKFELLOW, Class of 1889, was not only a pioneer settler in Arizona, but a noted architect. She designed several public and private buildings in Tucson, including the Y.W.C.A., the Y.M.C.A. and the El Conquistador Hotel.

SOPHIA G. HAYDEN BENNETT, Class of 1890, was the winner of the architectural competition to design the Women's Building for the Chicago World's Fair of 1893.

LOIS LILLEY HOWE, Class of 1890, ELEANOR MANNING O'CONNOR, Class of 1906, and MARY ALMY, Class of 1920, formed one of the first all-woman architectural firms in the United States. Located in Boston, Lois Lilley Howe and Manning was established in 1913, with Almy added as a partner in 1925. The firm of Howe, Manning and Almy survived until 1937. New papers related to the firm have recently been acquired by M.I.T. Historical Collections and research is planned.

ETHEL BROWN BLACKWELL ROBINSON, Class of 1891, was a niece of Elizabeth Blackwell, the first woman physician in America. Mrs. Robinson also became a physician and served on the staff, with her aunt, at Women's Medical School of the New York Infirmary, one of the earliest medical schools exclusively for women.

MARY C. LOVERING HOLMAN, Class of 1892, was a noted genealogist, active from 1906 to 1944. She served as co-editor of The American Genealogist and was a Fellow of the American Society of Genealogists.

ADA MAY FITTS, Class of 1896, was a friend and co-worker of Jane Addams at Hull House in Chicago. For twenty-five years, from 1912 to 1937, she was Director of Special Education Classes in the Boston Public Schools, working as a pioneer in the field of education for retarded children.

MARY LOUISE FOSTER, Class of 1897, was on the faculty of Smith College from 1908 to 1930, becoming Associate Professor of Chemistry. In the 1920's Prof. Foster was appointed American representative and exchange professor to the University of Madrid, where she organized a chemistry laboratory for women. In 1928 the University of Madrid named a scientific laboratory for her. She also published a history of Smith College graduates.

HOPE WENTWORTH NAREY, Class of 1899, was Professor of Physical Education at Mt. Holyoke College from 1914 to 1929; for the next twenty-five years she was active in the physical education field, publishing several books.

ROSE STANDISH NICHOLS, Class of 1899, was known as a landscape architect, author and civic leader in Boston. Her books include: English Pleasure Gardens, Italian Pleasure Gardens and Spanish and Portuguese Gardens.

ALICE T. LEE, Class of 1900, was a well-known educator in Lowell, Massachusetts, serving as Superintendent of Schools.

MARGARET H. NICHOLS SHURCLIFF, Class of 1902, was active in civil rights, especially with the Sacco and Vanzetti trial in Boston. In 1903 and 1904 she was New England Women's Tennis Champion. At her death in 1959, she was noted as the President of the English Handbell Ringers.

MABEL T. WELLMAN, Class of 1902, was Professor of Physics from 1934 to 1960 at Indiana University.

ALICE F. BLOOD, Class of 1903, was President of the American Home Economics Association and Director of the Home Economics Department at Simmons College in Boston. She was also an editor for the Houghton-Mifflin Publishing Company.

KATHERINE BLUNT, Class of 1903, became President of Connecticut College for Women in New London in 1929. She had been Associate Professor of Food Chemistry and Home Economics at the University of Chicago.

LAURA M. LUNDIN, Class of 1903, was Professor of Physics and Mathematics at Russell Sage College in Troy, New York between 1925 and 1940.

MARIAN C. COFFIN, Class of 1904, was the landscape architect for the grounds at the University of Delaware; she also designed the gardens for "Winterthur" in Wilmington, Delaware. In 1930 Miss Coffin received the Gold Medal of Honor from the Architectural League of New York. She was awarded an LL.D. degree by Hobart and William Smith Colleges in 1946.

KATHARINE M. DEXTER MC CORMICK, Class of 1904, was an internationally known philanthropist whose activities included personal involvement in the women's suffrage movement and extensive financial commitment to research for a safe birth control pill. Mrs. McCormick made a significant contribution to M.I.T. and its women through her generous gift of McCormick Hall, a dormitory for women students.

12. I met Mrs. McCormick in 1959 when I was a Freshman architecture student at M.I.T. I was charmed by her ready sense of humor and love of animals.

ELIZABETH H. MIDDLETON MADDOCK, Class of 1905, was a Trustee of Rutgers University, a Charter Member of the Trenton College Club and a member of the Mercer County Board for the Extermination of Mosquitoes. Mrs. Maddock was named New Jersey Mother of the Year in 1952.

LILLIAN MAY TOWNE, Class of 1905, was an educator in the Boston Public Schools from 1883 until 1950; she became Principal of the Bowdoin and Gardner Elementary Schools.

CLARA AMITY BLISS, Class of 1906, became a Professor Emerita in Chemistry at Wells College, Aurora, New York.

HELEN ROSS HOSMER, Class of 1906, after obtaining her M.D. degree, in 1937 became the physician for the Grenfell International Mission in Labrador; she was in charge of the Mission Hospital.

MABEL KEYES BABCOCK, Class of 1908, was a landscape architect in Boston who also taught courses in horticulture at Wellesley College. She was President of the M.I.T. Women's Association and Acting Dean of Women in the 1920's. Miss Keyes was appointed by President Hoover to be a member of his Conference on Home Building and Home Ownership.

GERTRUDE MARVIN WILLIAMS, Class of 1908, was Dean of Women at Wilkes College, Wilkes Barre, Pennsylvania. Her professional writings include: Understanding India (1928); The Passionate Pilgrim (1931); Priestess of the Occult (1946); Design for Recovery (1939); India's Silent Revolution (1919). She was named Distinguished Daughter of Pennsylvania in 1964.

FLORENCE H. LUSCOMB, Class of 1909, is still active in the women's movement although aged 89 years. Miss Luscomb was one of the first M.I.T. women to become personally committed to the suffrage movement; in 1934 she became the Executive Secretary in Boston for the Women's International League of Peace and Freedom.

ELIZABETH GREENLEAF PATTEE, Class of 1916, was a Professor of Landscape Architecture at Rhode Island School of Design from 1945 to 1965. Mrs. Pattee contributed frequently to gardening and landscape magazines. She was a Fellow of the American Society of Landscape Architects.

EDITH CLARKE, Class of 1919, worked for 17 years in the engineering department of the General Electric Company in Schenectady, New York. From 1947 to 1957, she served as Professor of Electrical Engineering at the University of Texas at Austin.

ELISABETH COIT, Class of 1919, is an architect who specializes in public housing; she is a Fellow of the American Institute of Architects, and a member of the National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Officials. In 1972 she was named Commissioner of the Landmarks Preservation Commission in New York City.

VALBORG ASCHEHOUG, Class of 1920, resides in Oslo, Norway. Miss Aschehoug has written more than 50 papers on microbiology, specializing in food canning. She was awarded the Officier d'Academie by the French government; she also served as consultant to the Food and Agriculture Organization of the U.N. She continues to serve as Abstracter, Scandinavian chemical literature for Chemical Abstracts, USA.

CATHERINE D. JONES WITTON, Class of 1920, was Professor of Biology at Simmons College from 1928 to her death in 1956.

MILDRED ALLEN, Class of 1922, serves as Professor of Physics at Mt. Holyoke College in South Hadley, Massachusetts. Her curriculum vitae has an extensive list of publications.

BERTHA S. WIENER DODGE, Class of 1922, is a well-known author of seven books, including the Junior Literary Award book, Plants that Changed the World.

MARTHA EISEMAN MUNZER, Class of 1922, worked as a high school chemistry teacher for 25 years. Mrs. Munzer has written several books: Teaching Science through Conservation (1960); Unusual Careers (1962); Planning Our Town (1964); Pockets of Hope (1967); Valley of Vision (1969); Block by Block: Rebuilding of a City.

EXCELLENZA L. MORSE WESTBY, Class of 1922, was the first woman to be appointed Chief Examiner, U.S. Patent Office; she was employed there from 1925 to 1955.

ANNA L. MOHR BRANZELL, Class of 1923, resides in Sweden where she has been employed in the City Planning Office of Gothenburg. Mrs. Branzell has written several articles on "green" areas and playgrounds.

DOROTHY W. WEEKS, Class of 1923, is presently a consultant to the Harvard College Observatory in spectroscopic research. She was a member of the faculty at M.I.T. in Physics, from 1920-24. In 1949 Dr. Weeks received a Guggenheim Fellowship; in 1969 she received the A.A.U.W. Achievement Award.

FRANCES L. BLIVEN WHEDON, Class of 1924, has worked as a meteorologist for the U.S. Army.

EDNA A. GERKEN, Class of 1926, served as Supervisor of Health Education for the U.S. Office of Indian Affairs in the Philippines from 1935 to 1947. She has published seven papers on public health topics and five books. Miss Gerken is a Life Member of the National Education Association.

DOROTHY QUIGGLE, Class of 1926, retired in 1969 as Professor Emerita in Chemical Engineering at Pennsylvania State University. Miss Quiggle holds one patent and has published 25 papers in her field.

MACHTELD ELIZABETH SANO, Class of 1926, is an Emerita Founding Fellow of the Tissue Culture Association, American College of Pathologists. She has published 64 articles, and presently contributes her services to the University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School.

LESLIE BRADLEY CUTLER, Class of 1928, served from 1928 to her death in 1971 as a member of the State Senate of Massachusetts.

FRANCES L. PARKER, Class of 1930, is a research Geologist with the Scripps Institute of Oceanography.

DR. CHARLOTTE WINNEMORE, Class of 1930, from 1947 to 1965 was Medical Director of the Planned Parenthood Association of Columbus, Ohio.

LOUISE JORDAN, Class of 1931, was the daughter of a successful mining engineer. In 1931, Miss Jordan went to Turkey to teach physics at the American School for Girls. She became a geologist, and worked for the Turkish government, Anzac Oil Company and Sun Oil Company. From 1955 until her death in 1966 she was a member of the Oklahoma Geological Survey, located in Norman, Oklahoma. She held extensive memberships in associations.

MARY D. BAKER SCOTT, Class of 1932, is presently a Professor of Biochemistry at the University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School.

ELIZABETH MORGAN HASKINS, Class of 1935, has been Professor Of Mathematics at Fitchburg State College since 1948.

MARION I. COOK LEAMAN, Class of 1935, was Professor of Physical Education at Wellesley College for 27 years, from 1930 to 1958.

DOROTHY D. THOMPSON, Class of 1935, is Professor Emerita in Chemistry from Sweetbriar College, where she taught for 20 years, from 1944 to 1964.

SHEA ALICE LA BONTE VALLEY, Class of 1935, is retired after 30 years of service with the U.S. Government. She worked as a Physicist at the National Bureau of Standards, becoming Assistant to the Chief, Division of Atomic Radiation Physics. In 1958 Mrs. Valley was named General Scientist at the Cambridge Research Laboratories, where she edited The Handbook of Geophysics and Space Environment.

MARGARET KINGMAN SEIKEL, Class of 1938, was an organic chemist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Forest Products Laboratory. She was the founder of the American Phytochemical Society and is known for her work in the chemistry of plant phenolics.

GEORGETTE L. MEYER CHAPELLE, Class of 1940, was a well-known photographer for Life magazine, working under her nick-name "Dickey".

RITA M. KELLEY, Class of 1941, is a physician specializing in cancer research in Boston.

JEAN VICTORIA LATIMER, Class of 1941, was Coordinator of Health Education for the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, serving for 24 years until her death in 1960.

The brief highlights presented here of the lives of these 62 women may serve to give an insight into the exceptional nature and diversity of the women of M.I.T. It has been a delightful experience for me to learn about them. Every new name with some biographical information available brought a surprise. I have been fortunate to meet five of these women. In Section II of this essay the oral history interviews may serve to further enrich the experience which was presented here in these all too brief glimpses.

SECTION II: Interviews with Five M.I.T. Alumnae

In order to answer the question of motivation for a woman to become a student at M.I.T., it readily became apparent to me that the answers did not reside in the available data. It was not possible for me to derive any personal reasons for motivation, so I decided to talk with some of the women who had been students at M.I.T., to see if they would be willing to recall their motivations plus other aspects of their student life.

The oral history technique seemed to me to be one appropriate way to approach the task at hand. Also, I was fortunate to have the enthusiastic support of the Director and staff of the M.I.T. Oral History Program. This new division was beginning systematic documentation of women actively engaged in science and engineering careers. The findings of this study seemed to mesh nicely with their interests.

In choosing a small group of women for the interviews, I was aware that many prominent women from the classes of the 1920's were still alive; but their advancing age presented one problem: they might not be having a "good day" when I would be available to interview them. So I decided to work with the next generation of women students at M.I.T.

As mentioned earlier in the Introduction, the time period selected was important to me for several reasons. Karl T. Compton, a well-known physicist and head of the Department of Physics at Princeton University, had been elected President of the Institute, to be effective July 1, 1930. He brought fresh educational attitudes and new ideas to M.I.T.

The Great Depression was entering its worst period, between 1932 and 1936, and would have had some effect upon student life. The enrollment of the Institute suffered, declining from a decade high-point of 3,209 students in 1931 to the low point, in 1935, of 2,507 students. The staff decreased from 588 to 498, and the operating income of the Institute fell nearly <sup>13</sup> $400,000, from $3,030,000 to $2,647,000.

Personal attitudes toward work and careers were affected, also, by the Depression. Through the interviews I wanted to try to determine whether students who entered college during the Depression years were more goal-oriented than previous women students, and what kinds of careers they envisioned for themselves. I wondered whether there would be a difference between their hopes and their expectations for those careers.

Five women were selected because they were students during the period from 1932 to 1936, lived within driving distance of Boston and had attained their goal: an M.I.T. degree.

The original transcripts and tapes of the five interviews will be deposited in the M.I.T. Oral History collections, and will be available as sources for future research. Each interview lasted from one and a half to two and a half hours; all were completely tape-recorded. A summary of each interview appears at the end of this Section.

Motivations; admissions procedures; background, including family history and early educational experiences; major course work at M.I.T.; their thesis research projects; and housing and finances were the major topics explored with each woman interviewed. They also made comments about the social life and any experiences that they had had with the faculty and administration at M.I.T.

The women who were selected to be interviewed were:

MARGARET ZAROODNY FREEMAN, Class of 1934, who received a Master of Science degree, was a Russian emigre to the United States. She was brought to this country by Andrew Crane, a family friend, who financed her education at M.I.T., as well as the educations of her three sisters and one brother. Mrs. Freeman is a graduate of Harbin Polytechnic Institute, located in Harbin, Manchuria. Her personal history was very unusual and filled with tales of travel and adventure.

ELIZABETH MORGAN HASKINS, Class of 1935, received her Bachelor of Science degree in Mathematics, as well as her Master of Science degree, from M.I.T. The S.M. XVIII degree was awarded in 1936. She came to M.I.T. directly from a public high school in Worcester, Massachusetts.

DOROTHY DEWHURST THOMPSON, Class of 1935, was awarded both her B.A. (in 1931) and M.A. (in 1932) by Mt. Holyoke College. A Ph.D. degree in Chemistry was conferred by M.I.T. in 1935. She is the daughter of an alumnus.

SHEA ALICE LA BONTE VALLEY, Class of 1935, received her S.B. degree in Physics. She came directly to M.I.T. from a public high school in Lawrence, Massachusetts. Her cousin was an alumnus.

AMELIA BROOKS VALTZ, Class of 1937, was awarded a B.S. degree in Architecture by Pennsylvania State University in 1936. She received the M. Arch. degree from M.I.T. in 1937. Her father was an alumnus.

In exploring their reasons for selecting M.I.T., three of the women (Margaret Freeman, Elizabeth Haskins, and Dorothy Thompson) said that they felt motivated by the fine reputation that M.I.T. had, especially for their specific fields of interest: mathematics and chemistry. (Margaret Freeman also studied Electrical Engineering while at M.I.T.) The other two women came to M.I.T. because they received person recommendations from men whom they trusted. Both of these men had been affiliated with M.I.T. previously:

one was a student and alumnus, and the other had been a faculty member.

Shea Valley's cousin, Anthony Fleming (Class of 1928), lived with her family in Lawrence; she thought of him as an older brother: "And I admired him greatly, and if he went to M.I.T., (then) I was going to M.I.T."

Amelia Brooks Valtz studied architecture at Penn. State with Philip Johnstone, and through his comments about M.I.T. and his personal correspondence with Dean Emerson of the M.I.T. School of Architecture, he was able to convince her that she should go there for graduate study. Mrs. Valtz had not considered graduate study previous to that time.

However, three of the women reported adverse comments from people who had tried to influence them to reconsider their decision to attend M.I.T. Two women, who came to M.I.T. directly from high school, Shea Valley and Elizabeth Haskins, met with severe opposition from the Dean of Women at their respective high schools, each Dean voicing the same fear: "You'll be the only girl in the class room." The third woman, Margaret Freeman, was counselled by her patron, Andrew Crane, to reconsider her choice, but she did not elaborate on the reasons behind his attitude.

All five women were independent, persistent and attained their goal: an education all five felt to be of superior caliber.

The five interviews reinforced my general viewpoint regarding the admissions procedure. From reading selected President's Reports for the 70 year period, I had become aware of the fact that women were not treated any differently than men, with one exception. In the 1920's and 1930's the Institute administration encouraged the Dean of Students to make personal recruitment visits to preparatory schools, especially those schools which had supplied large numbers of capable students regularly to M.I.T. There was no evidence that women's schools were ever on that list.

The admissions procedure, traditionally, was a clerical task --- forms to be completed and returned to M.I.T. for evaluation. From the very first classes, entrance examinations were an essential part of the procedure. Early examinations covered the following topics:

Arithmetic (including the metric system of weights and measures); Algebra, through equations of the second degree; Plane Geometry; French - Grammar through irregular verbs (Part I of Otto's French Grammar represents what is required.); and the first two books of Voltaire's Charles XII, or an equivalent; English grammar and composition; Geography. In general, the training given in the best high schools and academies, will be suitable preparation for this school.

The examinations were generally held twice a year in June and in September, and lasted two days: "Attendance on both days of either examination is required." This statement was noted as a regular entry in the early M.I.T. catalogues.

In the 20th Annual Catalogue, 1884-1885 will be found an entry which appeared in subsequent catalogues: "Women who are properly qualified are admitted to any of the courses of the school."

All five women mentioned the admissions procedure as merely a clerical task. None of them visited the Cambridge campus prior to registration day. Only one woman, Elizabeth Haskins, spoke about the entrance examinations, which, however, were discussed in the context of College Board examinations, so it was not clear to me whether she took the M.I.T. entrance examinations. Miss Haskins reported that the examinations which she took "required three days."

In the President's Report for October 1932, President Compton presented a change in the admissions procedure:

A recent study of the Institute records of men who ranked in the upper quarters of their classes at high and preparatory schools has shown that they have done exceedingly well in their studies at the Institute. Most of them have stood in the upper half of their Institute class and only a small percentage in the lowest quarter. In order, therefore, to give recognition to systematic and thorough preparation the Faculty has voted to try the experiment of admitting without examination those applicants who submit evidence of having completed their fundamental preparatory training with high standing in an accredited secondary school.

It is clear that President Compton wasn't ignoring the presence of women students at M.I.T. when he used the term, "men", but merely expressing a contemporary attitude toward his students.

As mentioned previously, two of the five women whom I interviewed came directly from public high schools in Massachusetts. They studied as undergraduates at M.I.T (Haskins and Valley). Two women worked at the Master of Science degree level (Haskins and Freeman) and one studied for her Master in Architecture degree (Valtz). Only one woman (Thompson) was studying for a Ph.D. degree. Elizabeth Haskins had both an undergraduate student and graduate student experience at the Institute. She remarked that "there really was no difference" because her undergraduate group in Mathematics was so small that "during the junior and senior years, the undergraduates were included in graduate-level classes."

All of the women felt that their theses research projects were "interesting but routine" and that subsequent career tasks were much more challenging. They also expressed a viewpoint that is commonly held by students today at M.I.T.: the academic work-load is so heavy from the very first term that the thesis project is viewed merely as a larger version of the normal M.I.T. requirements.

Housing was a topic that all five women discussed. Margaret Freeman was fortunate to have had a patron, so she was able to rent a tiny apartment on Beacon Street near the M.I.T. bridge. Elizabeth Haskins lived with relatives for her first term at M.I.T., and afterwards, moved to a boarding house in Cambridge near Central Square. Other M.I.T. students lived in this house.

Dorothy Thompson and Shea Valley were commuters. They lived with their families and commuted to M.I.T.: Dorothy drove her car from Newton, and Shea rode the train from Lawrence. Shea Valley was the one member of the group with the most limited financial resources; she mentioned that she had to walk to M.I.T. from the North Station in Boston because she couldn't afford to pay for the trolley ride to Cambridge.

Amelia Valtz lived at the Girls' Friendly Society on Commonwealth Avenue, Boston and walked to the old Boston Tech building at Boylston and Berkeley Streets where all the classes in Architecture were conducted.

Of course, financial difficulties were a major topic of each interview, but each woman remarked that life at M.I.T. went on "as usual" and that "people didn't talk much about the Depression. We were all busy studying."

Margaret Freeman received $1500 a year from her benefactor, Andrew Crane, who was providing the same amount for her brother, Sergei (also an M.I.T. student in 1933/34) and monies for "fifty other people." Mr. Crane stipulated that Mrs. Freeman's money was to be used "to cover all annual expenses", even so, she was able to save enough to send money home to Harbin, Manchuria for the care of her three younger sisters.

Shea Valley represented the opposite end of the spectrum, financially: she received $1.25 a week from her family "for spending money, which was to include lunches." She was fortunate to have the support of her uncle, a doctor, who paid for her train tickets. Mrs. Valley received scholarship assistance from M.I.T. from the sophomore through senior years.

Elizabeth Haskins also received scholarship assistance from M.I.T., which began in the second term of her Freshman year and continued through her senior year. As an only child, Miss Haskins was fortunate to receive enough funds from her family to cover her basic expenses, which were meager, but she did baby-sitting jobs, remarking that she never had enough money, "especially to be able to afford nice clothes."

Amelia Valtz and Dorothy Thompson told me that their families had not changed their home life-style very much during the Depression years. Mrs. Valtz's father was employed by the U.S. Government and reached the peak of his earnings during the Depression years, "because the Government was the last to reduce salaries." Both women were recipients of M.I.T. scholarship awards.

The topic of financial aid for women students intrigued me. After two of the interviews, I decided to try to find out whether women had been treated equitably by the M.I.T. administration in terms of financial aid; so I undertook a limited research effort. Material was available: financial records from the M.I.T. Treasurer's Office were pulled from a dusty corner and brought to the M.I.T. Historical Collections where I conducted the research. Beginning with tuition ledgers dating from 1882-1883, I was able to discover some surprising and heart-warming facts.

In 1886-1887 a scholarship exclusively for women was established; it was called the "Joy Scholarship." I was not able to locate its origins, but I plan to pursue this aspect of the research further. The first recipient of the Joy Scholarship was Helen Cooley, in 1886/87. The second recipient was Dixie Lee Brynat, who received the Joy Scholarship in both 1887/88 and 1888/89.

In 1889/90, in addition to the Joy Scholarship, financial aid was provided for one woman graduate student (Carrie B. Kenney) and a sophomore (Bertha M. Brown). From a total of 44 awards, three went to women. In 1890/91, three women received financial assistance from a total of 47 scholarship awards. In 1891/92 seventy-two (72) scholarships were presented and four went to women, including one of the twenty (20) annual Massachusetts State scholarships. In 1892/93 six women received assistance, three from the M.I.T. scholarship funds and three from tuition payments made by Mrs. Ellen Richards! By 1893/94 111 scholarships were available, but only three were awarded to women.

Additional records exist but I was not able to compile data from them during the time available for this research. To further my point, the next few examples have been taken from the M.I.T. President's Reports. Table II-1 has been compiled from the Treasurer's Report which appears annually; this Table covers the period from 1926/27 to 1931/32.

Scholarship awards made to men and women students at M.I.T., 1926-1932.

YEAR	MEN	WOMEN	% RECEIVED BY WOMEN
1926/27	306	14	4.4% of Total awards
1927/28	306	14	4.4%
1928/29	364	14	3.7%
1929/30	398	16	3.8%
1930/31	469	17	2.0%
1931/32	371	19	4.9%

In the 1932/33 Report of the Treasurer, awards to women students were not separated from the total, or for subsequent years.

Clearly, financial assistance was made available to M.I.T. women students, although not large numbers of awards annually. In the 1930's the Report of the Treasurer consistently justified the larger dollar awards to women students (per capita amounts) because they received awards from funds<sup>19</sup> "which were restricted to the assistance of women students."

Shea Valley did not continue as a graduate student at M.I.T. because her brother was about to enter college, and:

I didn't bother even to investigate whether any fellowships or grants were available because the one woman graduate student (in Physics), Harriet Allen, was having a difficult time trying to get grants. In Chemistry and Chemical Engineering there was support (for women) for graduate work.

19. M.I.T. Bulletin, President's Reports, 1930; 1931; 1932.

The job prospects for all five of the women were very bleak in 1934, 1935 and 1937 when they left M.I.T. Margaret Z. Freeman in 1934 was introduced by Mr. Crane to several of his business associates and friends, who were influential executives; but she did not secure a job. Her stipend from Mr. Crane came to an end when she received her M.I.T. degree in June 1934. She was unemployed for the entire year of 1935, except for the small amount of money that she earned from tutoring; she told me that she "would spend all available extra money on stamps to send out resumes." Mrs. Freeman was finally able to obtain employment at the General Electric Company in Lynn, Massachusetts in 1936.

Elizabeth Haskins fared better; she received a job offer in 1936 to teach mathematics at a new, progressive school for girls in New Mexico, and relocated.

Dorothy Thompson wanted to work as an industrial chemist, but found that companies were not interested in hiring women; she had a difficult time getting interviews: "Once Dr. Norris' secretary slipped me into one of the interviews; I think she called me 'D. Thompson' to get me in. But it didn't do any good when they saw who I was." As a result, she accepted a teaching position at Wheaton College: "Of course, I knew that I didn't want to teach, but it was the only thing that I could get."

Shea Valley was fortunate to have been a twenty-year old graduate in 1935. For the first time in five years, the U.S. Government offered a Civil Service Examination for Physicists, but, as Shea recalled: "I had no hope at all of competing because all the graduate students were taking the same test." Due to her age, Mrs. Valley was eligible for another Civil Service Examination for Sub-Professionals: "Well, obviously, I was going to get a first (ranking) on the list of all those Sub-Professionals because they (the other candidates) were only high school graduates and here I was, an M.I.T. graduate." She was paid $1,000 a year --- "a munificent sum; it was wonderful!"

Amelia Brooks Valtz was fortunate because she found two jobs. Both jobs were with noted architectural firms in Boston: Royal Barry Wills and Eleanor Manning O'Connor. When she started work for Mr. Wills, she was paid $5 a week. As she recalled, "I worked over-time the first week, so he gave me $7 --- he raised my salary to $7 a week." But she couldn't afford to live in Boston on $7 a week, so she interviewed with Mrs. O'Connor, an M.I.T. alumna, and got her second job. In 1938 when she returned from her European honeymoon, Mrs. Valtz rejoined the firm of Royal Barry Wills at a salary of $18 a week:

And now that's where the discrimination comes in. Although his highest draftsman was getting $37 a week (at the Wills office), John (her husband) was earning $42 a week (as a junior architect in Lynn). Mr. Wills' secretary earned $22 a week, and I was told that I could never be paid more than what the secretary earned.

When they spoke about the social life at M.I.T., the comments were varied and lively from all of the women. Elizabeth Haskins recalled that Margaret Freeman was "always having people over to her apartment --- all kinds, both White and Red Russians. There were many dynamic discussions; she really wanted people to get along together." Elizabeth Haskins may have been the only one of the five women who led a "normal coed" life because she lived close to the M.I.T. campus, and had time to participate in activities there.

Shea Valley led a fragmented student life which was filled with constant motion: "I had no life except the commuting: go on the train; study; go on the train; go to school; study; go on the train. It ate up three hours of the day. I didn't have time for extra-curricular activities or much social life."

Dorothy Thompson told me about the Ice Cream Group, a social activity from her graduate student days at M.I.T.:

You've never heard about the Ice Cream Group, I suppose. I don't know how it started, but I think somebody brought some in. Then they all got together, boys as well as girls, and made ice cream. Somebody borrowed a spoon, and everybody said, 'All right, we'll use the (spoon) just for the Ice Cream Group.' Is Avery Ashdown still at M.I.T.? Well, he was Faculty Member of the Ice Cream Group. I think we met about once a week. It was just the (graduate student) Chemistry group.

Three of the women met their future husbands at M.I.T.

Mrs. Valtz met John Valtz in her architecture classes: "I got to know John better than most women know their husbands before they get married because I saw him all day, and frequently, far into the night." He was the recipient of the Rotch Traveling Scholarship, and went to Europe in the summer of 1937 for two years of research. Amelia Brooks joined him in England during the summer of 1938 and they were married and travelled together until the winter of 1938 when they returned to Lynn, Massachusetts.

Mrs. Shea LaBonte Valley met George Valley at M.I.T., also:

There were only fifteen of us registered in Physics. George Valley, my present husband, was one of them. We started together at M.I.T. as Freshmen. We both were married to other people and then divorced. We didn't get married (to each other) until 1960.

The reason we didn't marry when we graduated was that we were both very strong-minded people. I was not about to go into the role of a housewife. And yet, in those days, that is what George would have forced me into --- not wanting to, but just by the circumstances and the pressures of society. Besides, he couldn't afford to get married; he was going to graduate school.

By the time we were in our forties, we had both mellowed to the point where we could put up with each other! We never lost track of one another over the years. We'd see one another at least two or three times a year (at professional meetings).

Mrs. Valley's first husband, Irwin Kruegel, was a graduate student at M.I.T. when she met him in the Textile Technology division of Course II.

Mrs. Freeman was divorced from her husband, a Professor of Economics at M.I.T. and did not elaborate details about the marriage.

Misses Haskins and Thompson never married and expressed no regrets about being single.

The encounters that the women had with the M.I.T. Faculty and Administration were diverse. The administration was generally viewed as "remote": "I never saw President Compton until the day I got my diploma."

Shea Valley talked openly about her Freshman interview with Dean Thomas Pitrie, who was newly-appointed to that position when Mrs. Valley arrived at M.I.T. As this sixteen year old, red-headed young woman sat in front of his desk, Dean Pitrie told her: "Well, we tolerate females around here, but we don't encourage them."

To my way of thinking, that statement probably reflects life in the 1930's with concise accuracy. Unfortunately, that statement also established the tone for life at M.I.T. for the women students. Just last week a senior faculty member said that very same statement to me (which reinforces just how mythical that statement has become), but the professor had a little chuckle in his voice. Thank goodness for that chuckle, because it indicates that our society has come to the point where we recognize the absurdity of the statement, and can now laugh openly at it. But how painful it must have been for a young woman in the 1930's to hear that statement. I was impressed because Mrs. Valley retained such vivid recall of the incident.

Elizabeth Haskins' father suffered a serious financial setback during her first month at M.I.T. and it appeared likely that she would be forced to withdraw. When the Bursar was approached for a refund of the tuition, and informed of the circumstances, he notified Vannevar Bush of the situation. Prof. Bush met with the Haskins family and made financial aid available for Elizabeth which would be cover tuition payments for the second term.

Miss Haskins also recalled another anecdote about the Bursar:

There was another women student, who came from Texas, and was my friend. She presented a letter instead of a check for her tuition payment. In her native drawl, she explained to the Bursar that her father was having "some temporary difficulties", and that he had sent his daughter a personal I.O.U. note to take to the M.I.T.

Bursar. When the Bursar saw it, he exploded: "Now I've seen everything --- an I.O.U. note from Daddy!".

All of the women spoke warmly of their professors. Elizabeth Haskins especially mentioned Professor "Tubby" Rogers, whose specialty was literature. With great enthusiasm she described his rotund figure and style, mentioning that "he was a favorite with the students, attracting large classes every term."

Amelia Valtz remarked warmly that she thought her scholarship "award" might have come "from Dean Emerson's 'personal fund', his pocket."

Shea Valley mentioned Prof. Ned Frank of the Physics Department:

I learned later, when we had become friends, that he used to say that he'd spot that red-headed gal who sat in the middle and when she looked puzzled, he would slow down. Well, it was easy to pick out one girl in the mass of two hundred and fifty students in that 10-250 Lecture Room!

All of the women that I spoke with liked their student life at M.I.T. Shea Valley was especially vocal about the quality of her educational experiences at M.I.T.:

I got a wonderful education at M.I.T., really. I had a better education with a Bachelor's degree from M.I.T. than a lot of the men I met that had Doctorate's or Doctor of Science degrees from lesser schools. I had some marvelous teachers. We were pushed; we were pushed; we were pushed. And I think that if I hadn't been pushed, I wouldn't have reacted. Every year I did better and better because I learned how to study. But it was because I was pushed.

And the same rigorous student life at M.I.T. continues today. Faculty and administration are working to maintain the same educational traditions for excellence which these five women, and the hundreds of other women who attended before them, experienced when they were students.
